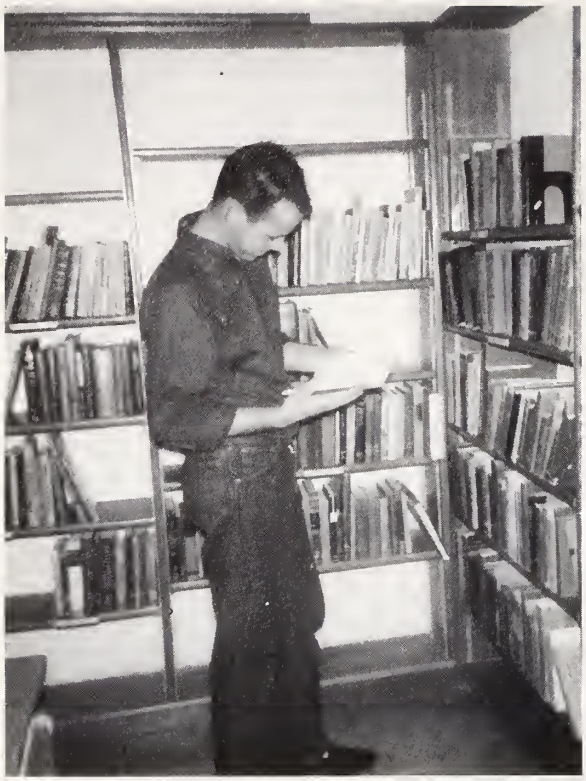
Randolph Public Library
Asheboro, North Carolina

The prime purpose of our school is brought forth in the school motto: "A sound mind in a sound body." The quill pen symbolizes our search for knowledge. The book symbolizes our search for knowledge from the past. The Greek statue reminds us that the Greeks combined these qualities to the fullest extent.

The date, 1904, is the time of the founding of our school, FRANKLINVILLE SCHOOL.



"I hope it has a happy ending!"

"Whistle while you work!"

"You hold it, and I'll turn!"

Poem

FAREWELL TO OUR SCHOOL

We have waited long for this final year
With toil and aches and sometimes a tear.
At last with graduation so near at hand,
We're hanging on like General Custer
When he made his last stand.

We can't say it's all been good
Neither all so bad.
But just to think school is over
Makes us feel so sad.

Life is short; years go fast.
Our work is just begun.
We'll do our best to win this race,
This race we have to run.

We hate to say good-bye to you.
To us you've been so good.
You've taught us how to read and write
And do all the things we should.

We've loved your halls and your rooms
And all your teachers, too.
But we're glad most of all
We've finally made it through.

Linda Parks appointed career missionary

Franklinville Native Now Calls Kenya Home

Linda Parks has known since her days in the 5th Grade at Franklinville School that she wanted to be a teacher, but it took nearly 30 years for her to realize that her classroom would be halfway around the world.

For the past two years, Linda, daughter of Don and Evangeline Parks of Franklinville, has been teaching missionary children and involved in Christian ministry as a volunteer in Tenwek, Kenya. After returning to the US last summer, she was appointed as a career missionary to Kenya by World Gospel Mission, and hopes to return to the East African country this August to resume her work.

Since her appointment, Linda has traveled through 11 states and given 25 presentations to churches and individuals, sharing her work and that of World Gospel Mission and seeking financial support for the next five years.

"I decided last year that I wanted to make it permanent, so I applied for and received career status," Linda said, although in her heart she had felt she was destined for a career on the mission field.

Linda's journey toward a new life in Kenya began in 1985 when an ad placed by World Gospel Mission requesting a teacher for children of missionaries at Tenwek and she applied for the job. In cation from UNC-G.

Returning to her Mount Airy classroom after the short trip to Kenya, Linda says she began to look at everything differently, and felt she was being led into missions.

"Here we have so much and in Kenya there are so many needy people who appreciate everything you give them," Linda said.

It was hard not to compare her own fourth graders who wore Nike tennis shoes to the barefoot students that attended the African schools, or the cavalier attitude some students showed toward pencils, paper and books- items that would be cherished by school children in Africa.

"It just seemed like something was out of sync, because the need in Kenya is so great."

The next summer, Linda wanted to go back to Tenwek but since the work team was full, she went to Boliva for six weeks instead. Although the experience was a good one, she says her heart was in Kenya.

was destined for a career on the mission field.

Linda's journey toward a new life in Kenya began in 1985 when she went on a three week work trip to Tenwek with 20 others. The group did odd jobs that assisted in the running of Tenwek Hospital, a 300 bed hospital started by World Gospel Mission in 1937 to witness to the physical and spiritual needs of the 300,000 member Kipsigis tribe in Northwest Kenya.

"The trip gave us a good feel for the work, and a sense that we were really helping others," she says.

Prior to the trip, Linda had taught 4th and 5th grades for 13 years in Mount Airy after graduation from Eastern Randolph High School in 1969 and receiving a BA and MA in Elementary Education from Appalachian State University.

ad placed by World Gospel Mission requesting a teacher for children of missionaries at Tenwek and she applied for the job. In September, 1988, she arrived in Tenwek as a volunteer to teach five children from grades kindergarten to sixth grade in one classroom.

"In Mount Airy, when I'd have difficult days, sometimes I would say to myself, 'All I want is a one-room schoolhouse out in the middle of nowhere,' and I finally had one," Linda said.

Before Linda arrived, missionary children were normally taught at home by their parents or sent to a boarding school 200 miles away.

In addition to teaching the children, Linda was the Librarian at the Nursing School which trains Nationals (natives) to work at Tenwek Hospital as well as to deliver babies in the villages. She also taught Sunday School at the Africa Gospel Church, planned programs and seminars, and filled in at other jobs when other mission workers were on furlough.

World Gospel Mission is an interdenominational faith mission, based in Marion, Indiana. The organization, founded in 1910 and Wesleyan in doctrine, opened its first mission field in China and now has eighteen fields around the world. Tenwek, in Kenya, is its largest mission field.

Tenwek is in the rolling green highlands of Kenya, 225 miles northwest of Nairobi, the country's capital. Nationals provide for their families by cultivating small farms or gardens and raising poultry and cattle. Some of the people speak English (since Kenya is a former British colony), some speak Swahili and some, like the local Kipsigis tribe, have their own dialect.

Linda will be learning the Kipsigis dialect when she returns, and would like to someday begin literacy classes for adult members of the tribe that have never had the opportunity to go to school.

In addition to Tenwek Hospital, World Gospel Mission trains ministers at a nearby Bible College, and has a Community Health Program to teach the Nationals proper sanitation and health procedures along with providing immunizations.

"A lot of the things that we Americans take for granted, (clean drinking water, safe food, and immunization against disease) are very important for these people," Linda said.

During her time home in Franklinville, Linda has not been away from the classroom totally. During November and December she taught 6th Grade as a substitute at Franklinville School. Most of the weekends, she has been visiting churches, telling people about her work, and seeking support.

Linda's parents assist her with the presentations, which usually include a 20 minute slide presentation and a demonstration of folk items from Africa she has collected. Parents, Don and Evangeline, and brother David, fully support Linda's decision to be a career missionary.

"It takes a little while to sink in," Don said, "but I think any parent would be glad to see their son or daughter decide to do this kind of work."

Linda became a Christian at age fourteen while attending Pleasant Cross Christian Church. The family now attends Parks Crossroads Christian Church.

Linda has presentations scheduled locally at Pleasant Ridge Church on Sunday, February 10th at 7:00 pm, and at Fayetteville Street Baptist Church in Asheboro on March 3rd. Interested groups that would like to hear her presentation can call her at 824-4016.

Linda says although she will miss her family when she returns to Kenya, she has another family on the mission field; fellow missionaries, the children she teaches and the people of the Kipsigis tribe. And she has her work which she feels she was called to do.

"We're given a mandate to teach the message of Christ to the world," she says, "and I feel like I'm one of the ones that should do it in Kenya."
